INDUSTRIES USING NORTH CAROLINA FARM TIMBER

GEORGE N. LAMB, Forest Examiner, Forest Service, U. S. Department of Agriculture

HOW TO USE THIS LIST

e firms which appear on this list are generally or occasionally in iarket for the class of timber product indicated. The demand for ı wood products is by no means steady, due to changes in the marhich sometimes occur at frequent intervals. A firm, for example, not be in the market this week for any logs or bolts, but next week be paying good prices for a large amount.

use this list properly, the owner of timber should decide in his mind what kind (or class) of product he has for disposal and the of industry most likely to purchase it. He should then write to ıost promising firms for prices and specifications. In such a letter ll pay to give a very definite statement of the kind of trees, logs, s, or other product, the quality, and amount of each that are for The prices obtained should be compared with those that prevail y for the same material. Helpful information on these subjects, ding how to estimate the cost of transportation, will be found in ısion Circular No. 74, Agricultural Extension Service, "How to et North Carolina Farm Timber." is well to remember that usually the highest prices are paid by making the highest use of the material. For instance, a factory ng berry boxes cannot pay as much for large, clear poplar logs as eer mill cutting for the furniture trade. Neither can a small saw-compete for large white oak logs with a factory making quartered eneer. Hickory is one of the best wood fuels, but it is worth more andles.

e author of this circular makes no claim that this list is complete. hoped, however, that corrections will be sent in to the Agricultural ısion Service at Raleigh, where a Specialist in Forestry is now at ervice of the owners of farm timber.

is list is arranged alphabetically by (1) counties, (2) towns, name of firms, and (4) for each firm, in so far as was reported, is given the chief product, such as "poles," or the kind of indussuch as "saw and planing mill." In addition to these there are l (5) the principal species used (white oak, hickory, etc.), and he form in which purchased (stumpage, logs, bolts, cordwood, etc.).
